FRIDAY, DECEMBER 26, 1933

The Johnsonian wishes you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. We shall not write an editorial on Christmas this year, because other people have had nineteen hundred and thirty-five years to get ahead of us and we fear that what we would say might be a little trite.

THE ESSENTIALITY OF CONFIDENCE

The nearly Yuletide season terminates another calendar year—a twelve month span in which is implanted the hub of our whirling twentieth century civilisation. As we stand on the threshold and scan the horizon of a New Year we summarize for the past and resolve for the future. Success or failure, opulence or indigence, distinction or social degradation is decided not by a mere turn of the wheel of fortune but by the direction of firmly established and well directed habits in the correct channels.

In order to secure a position for ourselves in the more desirable category it is necessary that we infuse into our systems the restorative element of confidence—confidence in God, man, and all the different aspects of our daily struggle for existence. Failure in business enterprise is a direct result of a lack of confidence. No goal is attainable with a stumbling block of skepticism or hesitating belief obstructing the pathway. Supreme and unlimited confidence as a foundation stone is faultless. The resolute ones to accomplish a task, backed by a periphery of success has lent a most helping hand to the march of progress through the ages.

Complete confidence in relation to God needs no discussion because credence in Him must perlate or mankind must perish. Faith is indispensable and its absence results in hopelessness and despair.

The intellectual business expert today, as viewed from the standpoint of the masses, consists in a hardened, cautious individual whose entire existence is dominated by a suspicious attitude toward his neighbor. To consider everyone a cheat until he proves himself otherwise is the platform upon which the major portion of our business affairs are conducted today.

A platform, however, in order to withstand the wear and tear of the weathering decades must contain material of a less shoddy grade than that represented by an unconfident and distrustful relationship between men.

The retention of the "eagle eye" is a requisite in conducting a successful enterprise but a somewhat modified and a more character building attitude would subordinate this tendency of miscreance to a firm reliance and unquestionable confidence in your fellow man.—The Erie Mirror.

TOWARD UNDERSTANDING

As the Christmas holidays get nearer, we hear remarks like these: "I hope Mother has sent my permission"; and, "Father never says the right thing in my permission"; and, "You see, they just don't understand how it is up here—"

Our parents don't understand how Winthrop works, normally; and no wonder. A holiday comes; they come up for us; we meet them at the front door and rush them back home. Or, they come to Winthrop to see us; and before they get here, almost, we manoeuvre them off to Christie or at least downtown—for dinner and the day.

What our parents see of Winthrop is not its everyday routine but its holiday rush. Is it any wonder that they don't know exactly what to do about permissions and what to expect of Winthrop?

Our suggestion for remedying this situation is that we give our parents a chance to see our school's regular routine. A great many other schools have an special day on which parents are invited to visit the campus and see what is being done and what is being attempted. Whether Winthrop can carry out such a program is a matter for consideration. The idea, however, is one worth thinking about. At least, it might be carried out in the diminutive. Not on a holiday, but on a regular school day, invite your parents to Winthrop. While you're attending classes, they'll enjoy wandering around the campus and through the buildings, looking at things for themselves. When your classes are over, you'll have time to show them those special places that interest them and you. Let them in on the club meetings and parties that you have scheduled for that day. In other words, show them your life at Winthrop.

Whether or not a Parents' Day is established at Winthrop, we think the principle of the plan might profitably be adopted by the students. If our parents see Winthrop, in running order, they will understand Winthrop better, will understand us better, will know better whether their expectations and our requests are reasonable. Most of all, they will coordinate intelligently with Winthrop College and with us as students, if they realize what Winthrop College is doing for its students.

BLUE SPECTATOR

Though it's late to talk about the Model League, still we must say there were some mighty attractive delegates over—especially the ones from P. C. . . . Congratulations to Catherine Hunt Paulding for the first diamond engagement ring in the Senior class. . . . Hope there'll be more after Christmas. . . . which reminds us that "Oddy" Burnette caught the bride's bouquet at her brother's wedding recently. . . . Extra! Flash! Miss Malchus' full name is Dorothea Louise Sophia Ilona Malchus. More congratulations to the new Alpha Psi Omega members. . . . And get The Johnsonian staff to tell about their Christmas banquet. It seems that a good time was had by all. . . . A certain freshman took her date to Johnson Hall, and Mrs. Jundin asked said Freshman to introduce her date. The innocent darling replied, "But I don't know you!"

Imagine my amusement at seeing Mrs. Bratton calmly smoking away in the Bursar's office the other night—it was not until I went closer that I noticed that the cigarette was a candy one brought from the freshman party. . . . And speaking of the party, Louise Pant was such a realistic girl that I wonder if she didn't frighten herself. . . . Wasn't the movie Saturday night precious? I wanted to sit through it twice. . . . Dr. Keith cherishes the fond hope that some day a Winthrop girl will marry someone whom she met at Model League. . . . A visitor on the campus, upon observing the "collection" of chewing gum on a tree near the dining room, innocently remarked, "I don't see how the girls will know which is theirs when they come back for it." . . . "Bliss-Barb" Weatherly's York friend couldn't wait until December 26 to give her his present, so he gave it to her by mail. (Incidentally she couldn't wait until Christmas to open it.) . . .

Did you happen to hear Mr. Noel complaining because a certain lady who works in the bursar's office wasn't designated as his partner in a church canvass? . . . Len Howe hopes to meet her "Waterloo" Christmas (she's going to two conventions). . . . It's getting so chilly these days that I advise all those going to Indianapolis and New York for the holidays ask Santa Claus to bring their red flannels. . . . Did you notice in last week's Tiger: "Oscar says that the Tiger representatives who went to Winthrop last week-end got tricked into spending the evening in one of the parlors, and they probably won't be getting back anymore?" This sounds to me like a reflection on the Clematites, not our peers. From my own experience I would never have come to the conclusion that they were the type to be easily tricked into doing anything against their "better judgment." But it's by their own words. I don't dare argue about it.

EXPLANATION OF A RED FACE

An automobile driven by a newspaper reporter stopped at a red light in Washington recently. Policemen suddenly appeared on each side of him, reports the Associated Press. "What are you doing in a stolen car?" one of them shouted. For a minute they had the news man puzzled. Then he remembered that earlier in the week he had reported his machine stolen. Then found it himself—he had just forgotten where he had parked it and had neglected to tell the police that he had located it.

According to The Technique, the five divisions of the male sex are:

A man: One who tries to kiss a girl on the first date and gets away with it.

A brute: One who tries and doesn't get away with it.

A coward: One who doesn't try and really couldn't get away with it.

A wise guy: One who doesn't try and wouldn't have gotten away with it.

A gentleman: One who waits until he second date to classify himself.

Falsifying Our Advertisements

Diary of a Maid in Uniform

Dec. 14:
Hear reports on all sides of the pre-Christmas romance slump. Christmas presents due in the near future are causing the usual shying-off of two opposite sex. Many a heretofore undying love is now termed by the male constituent as mere infatuation or mutual respect. The line-shooters are curbing their untidy tongues and leaving town over the holidays.

Xmas thus provides a sure and simple system for separating the wheat from the chaff.

Dec. 17:
Suddenly realize I have only three more days in which to lose twenty pounds. Start dieting strenuously.

Dec. 18:
The room is completely dismantled. Have wrapped up everything that's not called down for Christmas presents. Hope friends will appreciate such sacrifices.

Dec. 19:
Decide it is humbly impossible to write three term papers, two notebooks, and all my parallel in one day. Will study during the holidays.

STUDENT OPINION

Margaret Mosley—
College life would be so much more fun if we were allowed to entertain our friends over the week-ends. We go to Landers or Queens or Agnes Scott or some other neighboring college for the week-end; and when we start to return to our Alma Mater, we find ourselves in a rather embarrassing situation. Naturally our hostess says, "I hope you'll come back again" (which she means it or whether she's just being polite), and we can only smile and very modestly say, "Thanks. I'd love to"; never can we add, "And I hope you'll come over and spend the week-end with me soon."

To be allowed this privilege of having guests occasionally would make the week-ends more pleasant for all of us, especially for us freshmen and the unfortunate upperclassmen who have only two week-ends a semester in which to see friends.

Tagged. Kit Lake.

IDENTIFICATION

Have you ever tried to identify a student by the way he carries his books? A freshman carries lots of them crisscross on his notebooks; a sophomore carries numerous books and pamphlets, stacked above each other; a junior carries only a few notebooks; while a senior carries one or two large, important looking volumes. And the graduate students—they usually " tote " a short-hand notebook.

Professors carry their books in brief cases and try to appear unconscious of the bulky things. They must be traveling salesmen of learning.—Gainescock.

Columbia University will receive a cash bequest of $25,000 to be used "to found as many scholarships as it will in the school of applied science" under the terms of the will of one of its graduates, Dr. Frank Vanderpool of East Orange, N. J., who died last month.

Smoking in church used to be common, and the first edict against tobacco came from Pope Urban VIII in 1643 who forbade it because of the noise set up by steel and flint among rebelling naves during Mass.—Fortune.

DAFFYNITIONS—

It is quite impossible to stem the flow of stems from the pages of Flibster's Collegiate Dictionary, apparently. Here's another batch:
Stead—Past tense of stand.
Anti—Fags a dicker.
Punt-house—Drunken fraternity.
Royal flush—Queen's cosmetics.
Straight—a city thoroughfare.
Rais—Speed contest; division of people by color.
One-eyed Jack—Donkey, blind on one side.
Deuces wild—Mumoli gets angry.
Chop—Inexpensive; lawdry.

—Sawney Purple.

Brown University has an 81-year-old co-ed registered this year. . . . Winking one eye significantly, she declared in a recent interview the "co-ed of today has a good time, but the co-ed of 60 years ago had fun, too!"—Daily Tar Heel.

Field Alumnae Secretary Has Begun Her Work

Miss Mary Neusser, of Greenville, recently engaged as a field secretary by the Alumnae Association of Winthrop College, has begun her work in that office.

Miss Neusser, a graduate of Winthrop College in the class of 1924, had a high academic standing, and was president of the Y. W. C. A. during her senior year.

The chief duties of this position will be in making contacts with alumnae out in the state, in visiting chapters, aiding them in the solution of their problems, and in advancing the interests in general of the Alumnae Association and of the college.

Until recently the work of the Alumnae Association has been done by the alumnae secretary and a stenographer engaged.

Two new chapters of Winthrop Alumnae have been organized recently, that of Hampton, of which Mrs. Anne Lee Gooding is president, and that of Fayetteville in Chesterfield county, of which Mrs. V. L. Mungo is president.

FACULTY OPINION

Dr. G. G. Neidam—We have now a Senate but no House. There is nothing common about us, we are all educators. It is indeed Madame Senator. A fine new deal with no embarrassing Supreme Court. I heard the merchants down town had to order a supply of larger hat bands. Perhaps we will not have the laws codified. Here's a tip to the Senate—Why not go into a forty-day session just before the examinations?

In listening to the students' opinions about different people I believe the old ditty about chaperons still holds. It runs something like this:

"Here's to the chaperone,
May she learn from Cupid
Just enough blindness
To be wisely stupid."

It undoubtedly would be much better for a chemist to stick to chemistry and not turn into a columnist. Most things at Winthrop appear to be running according to Hoyle. May I be pardoned however to suggest that the writers of the annual, an excellent one, give the instructors a better break this year.

A few observations gathered hither and yon are: Are the Faculty members becoming more verbose? . . . Now with inter-collegiate debates why not also inter-collegiate athletic and social events? . . . Where, oh, where are the Pacifists gone? . . . Winthrop did not seem to enjoy going "E-English" . . . Hurrah! We are to have flowers again nodding along the college paths. Wonder when we will have our step-daughters again? . . . Now that the personnel members point out the way the students should go; the way they should go; . . . Our problem changes from giving directions to light fantastic ones, from Elstinate to anklets, and solved to the joy of Winthrop feminine mind. . . . And Merry Xmas and a Happy New Year to all.

My dear Miss Reporter, do not blame me for the above, you asked for it.

Scouts To Affiliate With National Troop

The Girl Scout troop on Winthrop campus is organizing a national troop to affiliate with the National Girl Scout organization. Mary Alma McLaughlin, first lieutenant, thinks that they will be ready to apply for a charter in January.

Although the Winthrop girls are over-age for the regular Girl Scouts, there is a special troop for college girls which they hope to join. To gain admittance to this troop, eight members who have passed the tenderfoot test are necessary.

At present the majority of the Girl Scouts are working on their second class units. At each meeting some part of the test is discussed. At the last meeting, the troop went to Fowell's pasture, where Miss Mary Schuchart, the faculty adviser, talked to them about trees.

There are about twenty-five members of the local troop. The officers are: Captain, Miss Schuchart; First Lieutenant, Mary Alma McLaughlin; Second Lieutenant, Jane Cooper; Scribe, Isabel Weston; Treasurer, Lauren Reardon.

Classical Fraternity Celebrates Bi-Millennium of Horace, December 12

Alpha Alpha Chapter of Eta Sigma Phi celebrated the bi-millennium of Horace, which occurred December 12, by discussing the poet's fifth satire, from the first book, at a meeting of the fraternity in the Music Room of Johnson Hall, Monday, December 8. The satire, which described a journey on the Appian Way from Rome to Brundisium, was translated by Dr. Dennis Martin. The translation was supplemented by Lillian Benson, who discussed the Pontine Marshes, just south of Rome; by Rachel Ray, who discussed Brundisium, "where," as Horace says, "the boat set fire to the kitchen in roasting lamb thrushes over flames, and where travellers had difficulty in rescuing their dinner"; by Annie Rosenblum, who discussed Brundisium and read a passage from Brundisium, describing the death of Virgil, Horace's companion, at Brundisium; and by Carrie Wooten, who discussed, with a map of Italy, the building of the roads and towns of the Appian Way.

WINTHROP COLLEGE

COMMEMORATES 50TH ANNI-

VERSARY FOUNDERS' DAY

Mrs. D. B. Johnson. In the evening the Alumni are invited to attend a reception in Johnson Hall.

Origin of Founder's Day

Founder's Day has been celebrated at Winthrop College since 1922. In that year a petition was sent by the faculty to the Board of Trustees asking that all classes be suspended annually on January 16, in order to honor Dr.

David Bancroft Johnson, founder of Winthrop College, and for forty-two years its president.

Idea of Winthrop

Fifty years ago David Bancroft

Johnson, the young superintendent of the city school of Columbia, South

Carolina, realizing the lack and the need for trained teachers in the city

system, conceived the idea of Winthrop

College, as a training school for teachers. Not only did he have the vision, but the determination essential for its fulfillment. In the summer of 1882, Dr.

Johnson went to Boston, Massachusetta, where he in an interview with the late Robert G. Winthrop, Chairman of the Peabody Education Board, presented the educational need of South Carolina, and secured an annual grant of $1,000, later raised to $5,000, from the Peabody Education Fund.

Mr. Winthrop then recommended

Miss Mary E. Leonard, of Rochester,

Massachusetts, a graduate of the Bridgewater Normal School, one of the earliest teacher training institutions in this country, be engaged as the teacher of the training school to be established in Columbia, South Carolina.

Dr. Johnson offered the position to Miss Leonard, and she accepted the appointment.

First Class of 19

It was on November 15, 1885, that

Winthrop Training School with its one teacher, Miss Mary E. Leonard, and eleven students was formally opened.

Such was the small beginning of Winthrop College with a faculty of 21 and 41 officers, and a student enrollment of 1301 in 1928-29. Winthrop College has now more than 12,000 graduates.

The Training School was held for the session of 1886-87 in a building on the campus of South Carolina, used at first as the stable of the famous "Preston Manor," and later as the chapel of the Columbia Theological Seminary.

The following year Dr. Johnson secured a small two-story frame house on Market Street, where the school was held until its removal to Rock Hill,

South Carolina, eight years later.

NOTICE
Don't forget to bring your money for your Train when you come back from the holidays!

State College in 1891
In 1891 Dr. Johnson succeeded in enlisting the aid of the late Benjamin Ryan Tillman then governor of South Carolina who promised his support of $50 to establish Winthrop as a state institution for the education of women. The bill passed in the closing hour of the last night of the session of the legislature. Governor Tillman promptly signed the statute which established The South Carolina Industrial and Winthrop Normal College for the Women of South Carolina.

From the date of its establishment as a State institution for the education of the young women of the State its progress was assured. In 1893 the General Assembly changed the name to the Winthrop Normal and Industrial College of South Carolina. In 1920 the General Assembly again changed the name to Winthrop College, the South Carolina College for Women.

It was in 1893 that Winthrop was transferred from Columbia, South Carolina, to Rock Hill, South Carolina. The one and two-year training course had been extended until at the time of its establishment in Rock Hill, Winthrop College had a four-year curriculum.

Winthrop is Standard College
In 1922 Winthrop College became a member of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. Today Winthrop College is recognized as a standard college, a member of the Association of American Colleges, the American Council on Education, the American Association of University Women, and on the approved list of the Association of American Universities.

The physical growth of Winthrop College has kept step with its academic progress. Today Winthrop College owns four hundred and forty acres of land of which about eighty acres constitute the campus. This spacious campus, with its magnificent trees, flowering shrubs, and flower gardens, is one of the most beautiful of college campuses. When Winthrop College was moved to Rock Hill in 1893 there were only the Administration Building and North Dormitory, later renamed Margaret Wance in honor of Dr. Johnson's mother. Today Winthrop College has President's home, six residential halls, the Crawford Infirmary, Tillman Hall, Kinard Hall, Carnegie Library, Peabody Gymnasium, Johnson Hall, Winthrop Training School, Home Management Home, and Joyces Hall.

Southern Type of College
Winthrop College is today one of the eight state supported colleges for women, all of which are found in the Southern States. This type of college represents the South's most distinctive contribution to education, for it can be found nowhere else in the United States.

While Winthrop College owes its origin as a training school for teachers to the realization of the need of trained teachers, and the determination to supply them, on the part of the young superintendent of the city schools of Columbia, Winthrop College is today recognized as a liberal arts college with a department of teacher training.

Winthrop's Three Presidents
During the half century of its existence, Winthrop College has had but three presidents. Dr. David Bancroft Johnson, founder of Winthrop College, died of his illness, December 24, 1923. He was succeeded by Dr. James Pinksy Kinard, now president emeritus, who for more than 30 years was closely associated with Dr. Johnson, and for about twelve years preceding, Dean of the College. Dr. Shelton Phelps, the present president, formerly dean of the graduate school at George Peabody College, was elected April 24, 1934, to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Dr. Kinard.

Counselors Give Party For Freshman Class

Freshman Counselors entertained all Freshmen at a costume party in Johnson Hall, Saturday night, December 14, after the show.

Dr. Wheeler Discusses Sonnet Sequence Friday

Dr. Paul M. Wheeler talked on William Henry Leonard and his sonnet sequence "Two Lives" at a meeting of the Pierian Friday evening, December 13, in the Johnson Hall Library.

The selection from the December issue of College Verse, pertaining to the Leonard was also read; as was one of Mr. Leonard's later sonnets.
